

Statement on the EU Referendum

The European Subsea Cables Association, the industry trade association for power and telecommunication cables within European and surrounding waters, has today released a statement regarding its position on the UK's forthcoming EU referendum.

The European Subsea Cables Association will remain neutral throughout the referendum process and will not be pro-actively supporting any political campaign, for either side, in the run up to the EU referendum.

“It is ultimately a matter for the British people to decide and we will not speculate on the outcome nor what would happen in either scenario. The European Subsea Cables Association already contains members that are within and outside of the European Union and regardless of the result the European Subsea Cables Association will continue to support its members and the subsea cable industry across the region”, Peter Jamieson of Virgin Media, Chairman of the European Subsea Cables Association, advised.
